Executive Summary

This Semiannual Report details CRCL's complaints activities, as required by section 803 of the Implementing Recommendations of the 9/11 Commission Act of 2007, 42 U.S.C. § 2000ee-1(f), during the third and fourth quarters of FY 2023. This report includes information on CRCL's investigative work during this time period.

The majority of complaints investigations opened by CRCL during this time period involved allegations made against U.S. Customs and Border Protection (CBP) and U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement (ICE). The largest portion of complaints opened concerned alleged inadequate medical and/or mental health care for detainees in ICE custody. CRCL also opened several complaints related to conditions of confinement in ICE immigration detention facilities, due process, disability discrimination, and sexual abuse or assault. CRCL opened complaints concerning allegations of discrimination/profiling at CBP checkpoints and U.S. Ports of Entry, due process issues related to individuals in CBP custody, and excessive use of force.

The majority of complaints investigations closed by CRCL during this time period involved allegations against ICE. The largest portion of complaints closed concerned medical care and mental health care issues.

CRCL works closely with its DHS agencies and offices to conduct its complaint investigations. CRCL's efforts to protect civil rights and civil liberties in DHS programs is strengthened by collaboration and cooperation from DHS agencies to in every step of the complaint investigation process, from coordinating onsite investigations to implementing CRCL's advice and recommendations.

(2) otherwise inform the public of the activities of such officer, as appropriate and in a manner consistent with the protection of classified information and applicable law.

II. Investigations Data and Analysis

CRCL reviews complaints concerning:

- alleged abuses of civil rights, civil liberties, and profiling on the basis of race, ethnicity, or religion by employees or officials of the Department, 6 U.S.C. § 345(a)(1);
- compliance with constitutional, statutory, regulatory, policy, and other requirements relating to the civil rights or civil liberties of individuals affected by the programs and activities of the Department, 6 U.S.C. § 345(a)(4);
- possible abuses of civil rights or civil liberties, unless the DHS Office of Inspector General determines that any such complaint or information should be investigated by the Inspector General, 6 U.S.C. § 345(a)(6); and
- department, agency, or element actions, policies, procedures, guidelines, and related laws and their implementation to ensure that such department, agency, or element is adequately considering civil liberties in its actions, 42 U.S.C. § 2000ee-1(a)(2) and (a)(3).

Pursuant to 6 U.S.C. § 345(a)(6) and internal DHS policies, CRCL begins the investigation process by referring all complaints to the DHS Office of Inspector General (OIG). OIG then determines whether or not it will investigate the complaint. In the tables below, complaints kept by the OIG for investigation are designated “OIG retained.” If the OIG declines to investigate a complaint, the complaint is referred back to CRCL for investigation.

Under these authorities, CRCL reviews and assesses civil rights and human rights complaints from members of the public. These matters arise in a variety of contexts—labeled “situations” in the tables below—and concern one or more issues. The tables below identify investigations by the primary situation and issue involved.

CRCL initiates investigations based on allegations of violations of civil rights, civil liberties, or human rights by DHS programs, activities, or personnel received from the general public, other federal agencies, non-governmental organizations, and Congress. CRCL may also initiate investigations based on media reports or other sources. Incidents that might merit investigation are also forwarded to CRCL from other offices at DHS and other government agencies. Allegations may be submitted via U.S. mail, email, fax, the CRCL telephone hotline, or the CRCL online complaints portal, which was launched in March 2023. Individuals who submit allegations via the online portal receive a confirmation message and reference number. The portal provides easy access for mobile device and tablet users. Allegations can be submitted via the online portal in ten different languages.

In addition to complaints alleging violations of civil rights and civil liberties arising from the Department's activities, CRCL has delegated authority from the Secretary to ensure the federally assisted programs or activities of the Department comply with, among other things, Title VI of the Civil Rights Act of 1964; Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972, as amended; the Rehabilitation Act of 1973, as amended; and the Age Discrimination Act of 1972. CRCL carries out a compliance and enforcement program that includes, but is not limited to complaints, compliance reviews, data collection, and monitoring. During the fiscal year, approximately 5,000 entities received financial assistance from DHS and thus were subject to these authorities. CRCL did not open any Title VI complaints during the reporting period. No complaints were resolved during this timeframe.

Table 1 summarizes investigations opened during the third and fourth quarters of FY 2023 by the primary civil rights issue raised, the situation in which the investigation arose, and the DHS agency that was the primary subject of the investigation.

Table 2 summarizes all 6 U.S.C. § 345 complaint investigations, including those initiated prior to FY 2023, in process as of the last day of the quarter (September 30, 2023).¹ If CRCL refers a complaint to a DHS agency for investigation, the agency issues a Report of Investigation to CRCL, which is reviewed by CRCL. If the complaint is not referred to an agency, it is retained by CRCL for investigation. CRCL issues retention memoranda for investigations that are larger in scope or complexity. CRCL uses its “short form” process to expedite investigations of narrowly focused allegations. The short form process makes it easier to open and close complaints, allowing speedier resolution. Cases that subsequently require additional work are converted to standard retained investigations. CRCL contracts with subject matter experts (SMEs) in areas including general corrections, medical and mental health, suicide prevention, environmental health and safety, and law enforcement practices to evaluate certain allegations and make recommendations.

When an investigation is complete, whether conducted by CRCL or the agency involved, CRCL may close the complaint and/or provide senior leadership of the relevant agency with any recommendations or advice for improving policies, practices, or training. CRCL notifies complainants of the results of investigations, including any actions taken in response. CRCL’s recommendations are reviewed by DHS agencies, who in turn concur or non-concur on each CRCL recommendation. For concurred-upon recommendations, the agency provides an action plan, and CRCL monitors the implementation of those recommendations. If the agency does not concur, CRCL may request that the agency reconsider its response to formal recommendations issued by CRCL; CRCL may also appeal the agency’s response to the Deputy Secretary of Homeland Security.

When CRCL closes a complaint investigation, the investigation may lead to a variety of outcomes:

Recommendation Memoranda: CRCL issues Recommendation Memoranda to address civil rights and civil liberties issues throughout the Department. These memoranda aim to enhance overarching DHS civil rights and liberties protections and typically recommend broad, systemic changes, such as the creation or revision of policies, alterations to practices and procedures, and modifications to training.

Onsite Recommendation Memoranda: CRCL issues an Onsite Recommendation Memorandum to DHS agencies when conducting a multidisciplinary onsite investigation. Multidisciplinary onsite investigations include the use of contract SMEs in a variety of disciplines, including medical care, mental health care, conditions of detention, suicide prevention, use of force, and environmental health and safety.

¹ The “in process” categories include multiple cases in which Reports of Investigation (ROIs) have been received from DHS agencies and are currently under review within CRCL. Pursuant to CRCL’s practice, these investigations remain officially “in process” until CRCL has completed its review and response to the ROIs.

Key Civil Rights Finding and Recommendation Memoranda: CRCL issues Key Civil Rights Finding and Recommendation Memoranda when conducting additional onsite investigations that are narrower in scope or focus than the multidisciplinary onsite investigations. These investigations may or may not involve the use of contract SMEs and include Spot Checks, Targeted Onsites, Rapid Response, and Disability-focused Onsites.

Informal Advice: In lieu of issuing formal recommendations, CRCL may conclude a complaint investigation by issuing Informal Advice to an agency. Informal Advice is appropriate for a narrow concern or request that is best addressed by communication to agency operations. These communications explain the issue or concern found and may offer suggested actions.

Complaints Closed without Recommendations: In the majority of complaint investigations, CRCL closes the investigation without issuing recommendations or advice. This occurs when allegations are unsubstantiated, when allegations do not warrant a recommendation because existing policy, procedures, and training are found to be sufficient, or when the agency has already addressed the concerns that the Compliance Branch identified.

Section 504 Determinations: In investigations of alleged violations of Section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973, as amended, CRCL issues written determinations detailing its findings of fact and conclusions of law. In cases where CRCL finds that a DHS agency violated Section 504, CRCL orders individual remedies or corrective actions, such as improvements to disability access or reasonable modifications.

Section 504 Informal Resolutions: Where possible, CRCL strives to informally resolve Section 504 complaints to allow for an expedient resolution of complainants' concerns while providing agencies an opportunity to collaborate with CRCL and implement corrective actions driven by the complainant.

CRCL strives to maintain transparency in its civil rights investigations processes and posts investigations-related work products on the DHS public website at <https://www.dhs.gov/transparency-civil-rights-investigations>.
